About this publication

Introduction

The International Organization for Migration has estimated that from 2014 to 1 September 2023, over 28,100 people died or went missing while attempting to cross the Mediterranean Sea to reach Europe to escape war or persecution or to pursue a better life.

This paper provides an overview of criminal investigations and other legal proceedings in selected European Union (EU) Member States against civil society organisations deploying search and rescue (SAR) vessels and aircraft in the Mediterranean and/or against individual crew members. Since 2018, national authorities have begun administrative and criminal proceedings against crew members or vessels involved in SAR operations at sea.

FRA published a note in October 2018 on Fundamental rights considerations: NGO ships involved in search and rescue in the Mediterranean and criminal investigations

. Since then, the Agency has been publishing regular updates on NGO ships involved in SAR operations, the status of legal proceedings against them and on rescue vessels kept at sea for more than 24 hours while waiting for a safe port.

1 NGO ships and aircraft involved in SAR operations

After Italy ended its Mare Nostrum rescue programme in the Central Mediterranean in 2014, civil society organisations started deploying SAR vessels and reconnaissance aircraft which rescued a significant number of migrants and asylum seekers in distress at sea.

In August 2014, the organisation Migrant Offshore Aid Station (MOAS) deployed the vessel Phoenix. Since then, several civil society organisations have deployed a total of 40 rescue vessels and four reconnaissance aircraft, mainly in the Central Mediterranean. These assets seek to reduce fatalities and bring rescued people to safety in the EU. Since the last FRA update published in June 2022, three new rescue vessels were deployed: Life Support, Mare Go and Sea Punk.

At the end of June 2023, 18 vessels and three aircraft were still deployed, the rest had discontinued operations. Six of the 18 vessels were under maintenance (Mare Jonio, Open Arms Uno, Astral, Rise Above, ResQPeople and Sea Punk).

Civil society actors deploying SAR vessels and aircraft faced numerous legal proceedings hampering their work.

By engaging in SAR operations at sea, civil society organisations play a key role in saving lives and mitigating the hardships that migrants and asylum seekers experience.

2 Legal proceedings against civil society actors involved in SAR operations

Several rescue vessels deployed by civil society organisations were unable to carry out SAR operations, following inspections, investigations or seizures of ships by the port authorities.

In other cases, crew members or civil society actors faced criminal procedures linked to their SAR activities.

Such criminal proceedings as well as administrative measures against deployed vessels, such as blocking the ship in port due to technical irregularities relating to maritime security, have a chilling effect and intimidate civil society actors.

Out of the 18 NGO vessels which were still active on 30 June 2023, only ten vessels were at sea. Six vessels were undergoing maintenance. Among the remaining ones, two were blocked at port, due to ongoing legal proceedings. All three reconnaissance aircraft were operational (see Figure).

Figure: NGO assets involved in SAR operations in the Mediterranean Sea between August 2014 and 30 June 2023, whether operational or not, whether facing legal proceedings or not.

Since 2017, Germany, Italy, Malta, the Netherlands, and Spain initiated 63 administrative or criminal proceedings affecting search and rescue operations by civil society actors. The majority concern measures against SAR vessels; one third of the 63 measures concern criminal proceedings against the staff working for the NGOs deploying the vessels or against the crew.

Most of the deployed vessels faced legal proceedings against the vessel and/or the crew (24 out of 40). Over time, FRA observed an increase in the use of measures of an administrative nature based on the laws of navigation and safety at sea (resulting in the vessels being seized or otherwise blocked at ports), and a decrease in criminal procedures against crew members or NGO staff (see Table).

Table: Active and non-active assets deployed by civil society: overview of legal proceedings

	Vessels		Aircraft		Total
	Faced legal proceedings	No legal proceedings	Faced legal proceedings	No legal proceedings
Active assets (including those under maintenance and blocked at port)	10	8	-	3	21
Inactive assets	14	8	1	-	23
Total assets	24	16	1	3	44

Table with an overview of legal proceedings against vessels and reconnaissance aircraft deployed in the Mediterranean by civil society actors. Source: FRA, 2023.

The Annex lists the ongoing and closed administrative and criminal proceedings against NGO rescue vessels and/or its individual crew members of which FRA is aware, having reviewed publicly available sources and having contacted civil society actors.

Most closed cases ended with an acquittal, the release of the confiscated or detained vessel; or were discontinued due to the lack of evidence.

Since July 2022, six new legal cases were opened in Italy. They consist of fines and blocking vessels for 20 days at port.

The most common measures are a consequence of the enforcement of Italy's Decree 1/2023, converted into Law 15/2023, which sets additional requirements on search and rescue operations by civil society. It obliges SAR vessels to proceed to the designated port; in practice, ports which are far away from the rescue area have frequently been assigned. In addition, the new legislation requires SAR vessels to proceed immediately after each rescue to the port assigned, thus reducing the possibility of rescuing other groups of people in distress over the course of several days. The NGOs that faced sanctions refused to head to the designated ports or decided to rescue more groups of people in distress at sea. Other legal cases were opened following inspections and the detection of technical irregularities. No new case was opened against individual crew members for aiding and abetting illegal immigration.

Legal actions against NGOs and volunteers involved in search and rescue at sea based on domestic criminal or administrative law must be implemented in accordance with the relevant international, Council of Europe and EU fundamental rights law and refugee law standards. This requires distinguishing between smugglers and those enforcing the human rights imperative of saving lives at sea, either by acting out of humanitarian considerations and/or by following international legal obligations for rescue at sea. National authorities and courts must find the right balance between applicable international and EU law, and national law. The 2017 UNHCR guidance on search and rescue operations at sea, including the non-penalisation of those taking part in these activities, gives useful guidance in this regard.

FRA will follow closely any further developments and continue to report regularly.

3 International and EU legal framework on SAR at sea

Assisting people in distress at sea is a duty of all states and shipmasters under international law. Core provisions on search and rescue (SAR) at sea are set out in the 1974 International Convention for the Safety of Life at Sea \(SOLAS\), the 1979 International Convention on Maritime Search and Rescue \(SAR Convention\), and the 1982 UN Convention on the Law of the Sea \(UNCLOS\). In general, the shipmaster of any vessel (both private and government) has an obligation to render assistance to those in distress at sea without regard to their nationality, status, or the circumstances in which they are found. A rescue operation terminates only when survivors are delivered to a 'place of safety', which should be determined taking into account the particular circumstances of the case, as specified by the 2004 amendments to the SAR Convention adopted by the International Maritime Organisation (IMO), to which only one Mediterranean EU Member State, Malta, did not adhere.

The IMO Guidelines on the treatment of persons rescued at sea further specify that a 'place of safety' is "a place where the survivors' safety is no longer threatened and where their basic human needs (such as food, shelter and medical needs) can be met". The Appendix to the guidelines recalls the prohibition of refoulement. Disembarkation where the lives of refugees and asylum seekers could be at risk of persecution, torture or other serious harm must thus be avoided.

The 2022 Joint Statement on Place of Safety by UN entities and the 2018 UN Global Compact for Safe, Orderly and Regular Migration (Objective 8) reaffirmed these basic rules and principles.

For maritime border surveillance operations coordinated by the European Border and Coast Guard Agency (Frontex), the EU Sea Borders Regulation (Regulation \(EU\) No. 656/2014) incorporates the obligation to render assistance at sea and to rapidly identify a place of safety where rescued people can be disembarked in compliance with fundamental rights and the principle of non-refoulement. This prohibits disembarkation of rescued persons in a country where there is a risk of torture or ill-treatment, irrespective of any request for asylum by the rescued individuals.

The duty to fully respect the right to life (Article 2 of the EU Charter of Fundamental Rights and the European Convention on Human Rights) and to save lives at sea rests primarily on EU Member States. These core obligations cannot be circumvented under any circumstances, including for considerations of external border control.

The European Commission Recommendation \(EU\) 2020/1365 on cooperation among Member States concerning SAR operations carried out by private vessels encouraged Member States to ensure rapid disembarkation in a place of safety, where the fundamental rights of rescued people are guaranteed, in conformity with the EU Charter and the principle of non-refoulement.

In August 2022, in the Sea Watch case (Joined Cases C-14/21 and C-15/21) the Court of Justice of the EU clarified that the port state may inspect SAR ships of humanitarian organisations and may seize such vessels, but only in the event of a clear risk to safety, health or the environment.

Annex: Legal proceedings by EU Member States against civil society actors involved in SAR operations in the Mediterranean Sea

This Annex provides an overview of administrative and criminal proceedings initiated by EU Member States against search and rescue (SAR) assets – vessels or reconnaissance aircraft – and/or against their crew. It starts with procedures initiated in Italy, followed by Germany, Malta, the Netherlands and Spain. It lists ongoing as well as closed proceedings known to FRA.

The Annex reflects information as of 30 June 2023. The legal proceedings are listed in reverse chronological order, taking the date on which the proceeding was initiated.
